

Contents

Introduction	9
I Painting as performance for the ruling elites	19
I.1 Painting in the presence of members of the elite in the sixteenth century	19
I.2 The ritualization of command performances in the presence of the Tokugawa shogun	24
I.3 Diversification of functions of painting performances in the presence of the shogun	31
I.4 Diplomatic relations and entertainment of the shogun's guests	45
I.5 Painting performances in the presence of the emperor, courtiers and members of the warrior elite in Tokugawa Japan	53
II Painting as performance of Identity	73
II.1 Cultural networks in seventeenth / eighteenth century Japan – Communities of creation, expression and appreciation	73
II.2 Literati gatherings and topographies of communitas	79
II.3 Collaborative production as expression of communitas	89
II.4 Finger painting and eccentric identities	98
III Performing painting as Business	105
III.1 The commercialization of culture in eighteenth century Japan	105
III.2 Illustrating crazy verses and popular fiction: Kyôka poets, gesaku writers and ukiyo e painters	106
III.3 Fame sells – building a name at calligraphy and painting parties (shogakai): professional bunjin , writers of popular fiction and painter-illustrators	113
III.4 Performing painting as public relations event	132
IV Epilogue: Performing painting in an expanding world of Art	141

Conclusion	157
------------------	-----

Appendices

Bibliography	159
Table of Tani Bunchô's Painting Performances for Matsudaira Sadanobu	177
Illustrations	181
Glossary	187
Index	189